North Shore Park Celebrates Diversity

Children from the Miami Beach Parks & Recreation Department programs reminded adults and kids alike that differences in color and culture strengthen and enrich our society as the youngsters celebrated "Black History Awareness Night" on Friday, February 24, 2006 at the North Shore Park Youth Center. The kids performed skits and danced to honor African-Americans past and present whose careers and personalities contribute to the American experience.
The audience of more than 250 also enjoyed authentic African-American cuisine served by the North Shore Teen Club.

"These cultural events at North Shore Park are not only fun and free for the community, they also teach our children about different cultures, and help them understand the myriad of different nationalities residing in our South Florida community," said Recreation Supervisor William Priegues.

Children from North Shore Park, Flamingo Park, and Scott Rakow Youth Center

performed to music by popular African-American music artists and the North Shore Park Youth Center's primer boys group performed characterizations of prominent African-American athletes and famous people in history.

North Shore Park's junior boys and girls participants reenacted the historic event of Rosa Parks refusing to give up her seat on an Alabama bus, an event that helped spark the Civil Rights movement in 1955.
North Shore Park's Senior Scenes program also performed a special dance routine to music by Stevie Wonder that proved to be a crowd favorite.

The highlight of the evening was special guest Booker T. Washington Senior High School Dance Ensemble's performance of a ballet solo and an African dance.
